The Balch Wing was built in the late 1930s. It represented a collaboration between The Elliot Hospital and the Balch Children’s Hospital which was located on Maple Street in Manchester, New Hampshire. The intent of the new wing was to deliver more comprehensive and efficient pediatric care in our community.

The first floor of the Balch Wing was utilized to treat outpatients and rehabilitation patients. The second floor was utilized for inpatient pediatrics. In 1976 pediatrics needed to expand and was moved to the third floor of the main hospital. The Balch Wing was then renovated to house various administrative offices.

In 2020 on the very site where the Balch Wing once stood, The Elliot opened the new Solinsky Center for Cancer Care at The Elliot.
