NH Hospital Association Honors Lawrence Hoepf, MD, of Elliot Hospital for Outstanding Service in Health Care

BRETTON WOODS – The New Hampshire Hospital Association (NHHA) recently honored Lawrence Hoepf, MD, of Elliot Hospital with the 2017 Medical Staff of the Year Award during the association’s Annual Meeting at the Omni Mount Washington Resort in Bretton Woods held this past weekend.

The Medical Staff Award is an honor bestowed upon a medical staff member from a New Hampshire hospital who devotes him or herself to excellence in health care. Dr. Hoepf was nominated not only for devoting himself to excellence in healthcare, but for his commitment to his hospital and the patients they serve.

“Dr. Hoepf has worked tirelessly for 30 years on behalf of his patients, and is known throughout his hospital for his devotion to quality patient care, and is extremely well-deserving of this award,” said NHHA President Steve Ahnen.

As a physician leader within the hospital and the community, Dr. Hoepf is lauded for his extraordinary skill as a surgeon, his demand for high quality care by everyone involved in the care of patients, and his commitment to his fellow physicians, nurses and staff alike. He has been instrumental in strengthening the cooperation between the medical staff, the Board of Directors, Administration and employees.

“It was wonderful to see an Elliot colleague recognized for the tremendous impact he has had on patients and on the community. It was also heartwarming to hear Larry recognize the importance of his wife’s support to ensure that, together, they raised a healthy family while he was so incredibly busy and dedicated to his profession,” said Greg Baxter, MD, Chief Medical Officer.
